The Courrier des Eta's Unis, a French journal published in New York, corrects a misapprehension of a cotemporary in regard to the power enjoyed by the De Broglie cabinet in its use of civil subordinates to influence the election in France. Aside from the prefects, sub-prefects, attorneys, magistrates, &c., who form but a small part of the administrative army, and are subject to removal for political reasons, the civil officers of the government cannot be removed except for incompetency or misconduct. The Courrier explains that from the moment employes receive salaries they leave 5 per cent. of their earnings to be capitalized for their benefit in special pension securities, thus acquiring a property right which generally reverts in part to the widow of an employe, and the term at which the right to payment definitely accrues is ordinarily after 25 years' active or 30 years' sedentary service. An employe is thus a creditor of the state by virtue of a title avalagous to, though differing in origin and essence from, that of a bondholder, and he cannot be deprived of his rights except from other than political motives.

The energy which the citizens of St. Johns' display in the matter of rebuilding the burnt portion of the town speaks well for their enterprise and public spirit. As was to be ex. pected they now propose to erect a better class of buildings, which will be less liable

The Secretary of the Navy has done a good thing in issuing an order forbidding the levying of political contributions on navy yard employes, and prohibiting their discharge for political reasons. It is to be supposed that the spirit of the order will also prevent the employment of a large number of men at the different yards just before elections, in order to secure their vote for "the party." These men are, as a rule, discharged after the elections are over, and necessarily feel that their temporary employment was in the nature of a bribe for their votes. The practice is a shameless one, and we hope Secretary Thompson will see that it is broken up.

Ex-Secretary Robeson is talked of as the next republican candidate for governor of New Jersey. The New York Herald, having pronounced both parties dead, says that certainly no live party would "trot out" Mr. Robeson for governor, even if it were sure he would be beaten. We concur.

The bestowal of honorary degrees by American colleges has, as a rule, been carried to such lengths of late years that people have come to look upon such degrees as mere empty compliments. The press generally, however, regard the bestowing of the degree of Doctor of Laws by Harvard University on President Hayes, Senator Bayard, and Attorney General Devens, as a proper recog nition of the learning and high character of the gentlemen thus honored. If all our institutions of learning will exercise a similar discrimination in bestowing honorary degrees, the latter will ultimately be regarded as something worth possessing.

A number of discharges are now being made in most of the departments. Some of these are rendered necessary by the reduced appropriations for the fiscal year beginning the 1st proximo, but in too many cases they are made to make room for other appointments. This is one of the evils of our uncivil service which ought to be remedied as speedily as possible. Turning out efficient employes to make room for candidates pressed by politicians is no way to reform the civil service.
